ARMS IN GERMANY.

ALLIED COMMISSION'S FIND.

BERLIN, August 4.

The German military authorities tried to prevent the visit. A German officer stood at the front door of the magazine declaring that the place was mined. Locksmiths had to be employed to open doors in other parts of the fortress.

EMPIRE WIRELESS.

NEED FOR UNITY.

LONDON, August 4.

"The position of the Empire wireless has greatly improved but is still far from satisfactory. Meanwhile other countries are getting ahead of us," said Mr. Robert Donald presiding at the annual meeting of the Empire Press Union. He said that the Post Master General's recent announcement of a new Empire wireless policy was a surprising confession that the policy of the Post Office in the past was wrong. The new plan had not undone the early blunders and meant an entire change in equipment, methods and transmission. We were threatened with two or three different systems of wireless in the Empire none of which would be a complete chain in itself. Unless they coordinated there would certainly be delay and confusion. All high-powered stations should work in harmony and the whole Empire system or systems should be under unified control.

'Ulcers the Size of Man's Hand.'

Our Portrait is of Mr. C. M. THOMPSON, of 4, Midland Grove, Edward Road, Balsall Heath, Birmingham, England, who writes:

"In July last I happened to get a scratch on my leg. It was so slight I took no notice of it till a fortnight elapsed, when I found I could hardly walk to work. It gradually grew worse, when it turned septic. It is the period I eat from bad I owe it all to it. At length the sore turned into quite a I had at that particular time ulcers the size of a man's hand (one round my leg. After I had tried many other things I read about your Clarke's Blood Mixture and decided to take it. It was then in the month of October, and after the second bottle, I found relief. I continued until the seventh bottle when I found myself completely rid of the trouble. You can make use of the statement and I will be only too pleased to answer any enquiries, because it is to nothing else but Clarke's Blood Mixture that I owe my 14 of gratitude."

Clarke's Blood Mixture quickly attacks, overcomes, and expels the impurities; that is why so many remarkable recoveries stand to its credit. Pleasant to take, and free from any injurious ingredients. ## ANCIENT EXCAVATIONS IN AFRICA.

Johannesburg, June 23.—Remarkable interest is being taken in the discovery of mummy caves more than sixty feet below the ground in the Koster district, 100 miles west of Johannesburg, and twenty-five miles from railroads, and the government will probably conduct a scientific investigation shortly.

A young man named Theron, whose father years ago owned the farm where the caves were found, states that in 1912 he went down into the caves with a schoolboy friend. They had a packet of candles and wandered for miles underground. In the place they came across large, high walls which were covered with what he calls red pictures, but which were probably bushmen paintings.

At another spot he found the cave full of live bats the wind from whose wings extinguished the candles. Finally the air became colder and the floor of the cave had a hollow ding, while there was the sound of rushing water as though an underground river ran beneath their feet. Fearing that the floor might collapse into the river, they retraced their steps.

One theory put forward now is that the diamonds found in the Vaal river came originally from an underground river such as that which is supposed to flow beneath the Koster caves. In years gone by large sums were spent in trying to discover whence came the diamonds found in the Vaal river.

Entrance to the caves lies at the bottom of a forbidding hole in the ground sixty feet deep, for the descent of which a rope tied to a tree trunk is necessary.

Several hours spent in the caves by investigators failed to give any estimate of their size, as passages extend for long distances, possibly for miles. The work of exploration is not free from danger on account of the pitch-blackness, the insecure rocks and the risk of falling into crevices.

In spite of the shortness of the visit investigators saw in a fissure high up in a rock on the side of the cave the mummified body of a huge buck on top of which, also wedged in the rocks, was the body of a large tiger with its jaw fiercely extended. Two members of the party attempted to get the horns of the buck, but a fall of rock compelled them to abandon the effort.

On the floor of the cave were found the mummified remains of a monkey measuring six feet from head to toe in an excellent state of preservation. On the floors were a large number of bones and chipped flints.

JUPITER'S TROUBLES.

GIANT PLANET'S SURFACE SLIPPING.

In a statement to the Royal Astronomical Society, London, Mr. Frank Sargent, of the Durham University Observatory, records a curious phenomenon on the surface of Jupiter, which is 1,000 times the size of the earth.

The surface of the planet, according to astronomers, is covered with dense masses of vapour, which owing to Jupiter's rapid spin (under 10 hours instead of 24 as in the case of the earth) are drawn out into long belts parallel to its equator. During May, 1921, Mr. Sargent discovered that a large area of the planet's surface had become greatly disturbed and was moving 70 miles an hour slower than the rest. The area affected was equal in size to the continent of Europe. Imagine Ireland suddenly breaking from her moorings and drifting across the Atlantic and one has some idea of what has happened on Jupiter.

It was interesting to find this great disturbance repeating itself within twelve months. This year's disturbance was first detected on March 31, since when the area has been kept under close scrutiny. The slipping is not quite so large as last year and the movement is somewhat slower. During the time the feature has been under observation it has drifted about 50,000 miles, or equal to about twice round the earth.

What these movements mean is at present a mystery.

A WARNING.

DEADLY PROHIBITION DRINKS.

A solemn warning to drinkers of illicit liquors, which means a great part of the population of the city, is given by the Public Prosecutor of New York. He declares that a careful examination of the liquor daily sold in New York and other cities shows that no less than 98 per cent. is unfit for human consumption. A large proportion is instant and deadly poison. Whether the samples analysed came from the squalid public-houses or from high-class hotels, he adds, makes no difference. Only 2 per cent. is genuine.

The report is amplified by Mr. Palmer Canfield, special prosecutor under the Prohibition laws. He states that the liquor sold as whisky was found in the majority of cases to be raw grain alcohol coloured with burnt sugar, caramel or prune juice. "Not only that," he adds, "anyone who takes a drink nowadays runs serious risks of getting wood alcohol in which case he has signed his own death warrant. Furthermore, the stills run by people in their own homes are daily blowing up and endangering the lives of the owners and their neighbours. When that does not happen the only result is a semi-poisonous product."

As if to justify these warnings, a report comes from Atlantic City, a large seaside resort on the Atlantic, of the murder of a well-known inhabitant whose wife shot him to protect herself and her children from his drunken mania. The couple spent the evening at a popular cafe on the seafront. During the evening the husband drank a quantity of "whisky." On his return home he became demented. After beating her with a heavy pair of boots, he chased her all over the house until she locked herself in the nursery. When her husband forced his way through the door and endeavoured to strangle her, she seized a pistol and shot him dead.

LORD NORTHCLIFFE'S SERIOUS CONDITION.

LONDON, August 3rd.

A grave Bulletin in regard to Lord Northcliffe, who has been suffering from heart trouble, was issued this morning. It says, there is some increase of heart weakness, accompanied by general exhaustion. His Lordship's condition gives rise to great anxiety.

DISTURBANCES IN ITALY.

ROME, August 3rd.

The tension between the Fascisti and the Communists is becoming more acute. Disturbances, accompanied by casualties, have occurred at Genoa and Ancona, but nevertheless the Government is confident of restoring complete order in a few days.

INDIAN DISTURBANCES.

MADRAS, August 3rd.

One hundred and eighty-six Congress and Khilafat Volunteers have been arrested at Guntur, in consequence of defiance of an order prohibiting a meeting in honour of the arrival of the Committee which is touring India to see whether the country is prepared for civil disobedience. There was no disorder.

BELLICOSE GREECE.

ATHENS, August 4th.

The Greek reply to the Powers says they had decided to occupy Constantinople to obtain a prompt conclusion of peace. If the Powers hinder the exercise of Greece's rights as a belligerent, they will only make the situation still more complicated. The reply finally draws attention to the danger of delay in forcing a definite peace, causing fresh calamities for Christians, and perpetuating the intolerable state of things in the Near East.

THE "EGYPT" DISASTER.

LONDON, August 3rd.

Mr. Bucknill, representing the India Office, contended in his address to the Court that inadequate time was allowed for boat drill before the Egypt left Tilbury. He declared the evidence showed that the natives did given tasks faithfully, but in the absence of leadership became confused.

Counsel for the Peninsular and Oriental Co. submitted that the Board of Trade's case against the company had left out of sight the shortness of time and the extraordinary list after the collision. He submitted that even if some natives lost their heads, the most highly organised bodies of men sometimes stampeded, and he contended that the Egypt was travelling slowly and carefully.

The Solicitor-General submitted that the Egypt was travelling at an immoderate speed, having regard to the fog, and contended there was a grave absence of discipline, lack of system, organisation, responsibility, and a totally insufficient training. He does not doubt that Lascars were very good seamen when properly led, but it was essential for the white officers and crew to be able to speak their language.

WAR DEBTS.

BERLIN, August 3rd.

The Balfour Note has made a most favourable impression. The newspaper Der Tag thinks that it foreshadows at least diplomatic support for Germany by England in the controversy with France, and is of the opinion that Anglo-American action is imminent.

The Boersen Courier says the Note is regarded in political circles as fresh proof that the reparations problem is nearing solution.

BANQUE INDUSTRIELLE ADVANCES.

PARIS, August 3rd.

In replying to a question, the Finance Minister stated that the Government of Indo-China, on January 27th, 1921, advanced 25,000,000 francs to the first syndicate formed to come to the assistance of the Banque Industrielle de Chine, and 10,000,000 francs to the second such syndicate, on the following month. These two subscriptions were authorised by the Cabinet Council.

"TRUTH, JUSTICE, PUBLIC SERVICE"

HONGKONG, SATURDAY, AUGUST 5 1922

ADVERSARIA.

BRITISH TUCHUNS

My heart went out to Davie Landale last week when Reuter reported him as saying to the China Association this:

"Great improvement would result if the people of China could rid themselves of Military Governors—who wasted the country's money on the upkeep of armies for their own personal aggrandisement—and replace them by Civil Governors."

It suggested to me how nice it would be, just for a change, if such critics would say "the people of Britain" instead of "the people of China." There is Tuchun Churchill, for example. I would like to see him outed by a civil Col Sec.

ORIENTAL RELIGIONS

Writing in the Church Family Newspaper, Canon Barnes says that "Oriental religious ideas show some tendency to spread" in seaports like Liverpool and Cardiff, and he speaks of "deplorable consequences" and the "gravity of the situation." But, he seems to add this with some regret, "religious ideas cannot be prevented from crossing national frontiers." True, or the missionary's occupation would be gone. But now, will someone kindly tell me how to distinguish between the religion of Canon Barnes and "oriental religious ideas"? I heard or read somewhere, quite a long while ago, that the ideas of the Church came from the East.

CORRESPONDENCE

Writing to a beautiful lady in another country, who has two beautiful children, I enclosed two 'kisses" for the babies, a big one for the youngest. My correspondent replied: "We were glad to get the two kisses. My mother took one, and I took the other. Please gue s which of us got the big one." Isn't she a tease? I have written to tell her that her guessing competition is too easy. She herself took the big one. I reason in this way. Her mother took the smaller one because she is a wise woman and knows that she can have as many more as she likes for the asking. This is true, because she is a dear old lady and I love her. My lovely correspondent would take the bigger one because she has no right to one from me at all, being married to a man who is my friend; and because stolen fruit is the fruit we eat most heartily. "I confess, my dear" (wrote I) "that when I enclosed the kisses for your babies, I hoped you would do as all wise young mothers do, and taste them first to see that they were warm enough. But that you would rob your own children, and take for yourself what you had no moral right to, is a serious shock to me. For that reason I shall not come again to visit you, because I am a weak man, and would be sure to want to give you another on sight." And that, let me tell you, is a severe punishment, which hurts me perhaps more than it will hurt her.

SALAD

"I sometimes think that salad is the most important thing in life. I have preached salad in the past, and am ever ready to lead contrite and willing spirits into the ways of salad righteousness. Ways, did I say? Pardon me the pen slip. There is but one way, the straight and narrow way of perfection. Here are some salad verses. I do not quote them because they teach the right way. They do not. I quote them for two reasons. Item, because they have a pleasing jingle. Item, because some awful creature in Shanghai has published an "interpretation" meant for prose and practicality. To that I come presently. First the jingle:

Two large potatoes passed through kitchen sieve.
Unwonted softness to the salad give;
Of ardent mustard add a single spoon,
Distrust the condiment which bites too soon;
But deem it not, thou man of herbs, a fault
To add a double quantity of salt;
Three times the spoon with oil of Lucca crown,
And once with vinegar, procured from town,
True flavor needs it, and your poet begs."
The pounded yellow of three hard-boiled eggs;
Let onion atoms lurk within the bowl,
And scarce suspected animate the whole;
And, lastly, on the flavoured compound toss
A magic teaspoon of anchovy sauce
Then, though green turtle fail, though venison's tough,
And ham and turkey are not boiled enough,
Serenely full, the epicure may say—
"Fate cannot harm me—I have dined to-day."

The Rev. Barham was, as regards our salad religion, heterodox but pious. In his barbarous period he was a well meaning man. There is a dish the Germans call a salad, and it is indeed excellent food; but it is not salad. Potatoes are not true salad ingredients. I particularly abhor his heresy of eggs, believing from the bottom of my being that he who would interrupt the harmony of salad with the discordant yolk is a lost soul. I forgive him much for the line that speaks of onions, scarce suspected, animating the whole; and then his infamous anchovy suggestion drives me to anger again, so that I yell for the thumbscrew and the rack. So does profound faith offended involve strong emotions. On the whole, however, there was piety in Barham. All I allege is that he was misled into grievous error.

But now observe the prose "interpretation" that has infuriated me:

"Boil two large potatoes until tender, and put them through a potato-ricer. Add one teaspoonful of mustard and two scant teaspoonfuls of salt. Stir in three tablespoonfuls of olive or other salad oil and one tablespoonful of vinegar, tarragon preferred. To this add the yolks of three hard cooked eggs put through a sieve and one small onion grated. Mix all together well and add last one teaspoonful of anchovy sauce. Chill, form into balls, and serve on lettuce accompanied by a French dressing not very highly seasoned."

To call that sinful is not enough; it is damn foolish. It must have been the work of some incredibly ignorant atheist, devoid of decency and absolutely lacking in perception. For a little while you will notice that he merely follows the verses into error. Then, when he comes to the crux and vital principle of salad, the oil, the living soul and the raison d'etre of it (mark you that) the villain has the impudence to shove his own one in, with an interpolation so vile and despicable and treacherous and homicidal that it leaves me at a loss for words to fit it. Note that he says "olive or other salad oil." There is no other oil than olive for salads. I murdered a grocer at Home for telling me there was, and trying to sell it to me. Barham said Lucca, and Lucca is an olive place. I do not stand out for Lucca, because there are other olive places; but olive I stipulate it must be. Malaga in Spain will do, and various French olive districts as well as Italian can satisfy my requirements; but "other" oils than olive for this purpose I refuse to hear of. You will be well advised to repudiate them likewise. There is in the olive a something special and spiritual that none other may pretend to. There is unction in it, and the grace of God. But "substitutes" (by low tradesmen called "just as good") are of the devil. Note further that this thing, this abject animal, pretended to a nicety in the matter of vinegar, as if that mattered. So long as it is vinegar, and not acetic acid, 'twill serve, for one uses less of it than these recipes prescribe. Of that I will tell you anon. First I must point out that this Shanghai bungler, not content with Barham's heresy of an anchovy impertinence, adds on his own account the atrocity of "a French dressing not very highly seasoned." Most of the recipe has been dressing all along, and he does not realize it. He asks for a dressing on a dressing. He knows not what a salad is, you will also notice. Having copied Barham to the end, he pontificates "serve on lettuce." Serve on fiddlesticks. Bring me this idiot's head served on a charger, and I'll put French dressing on it. Let us dismiss him from our minds, as we do other unpleasant things. Let us now approach, reverently, the proper business of preparing a salad. Let me show you.

Take you the largest bowl you can find. The so-called "salad bowls" of commerce are usually far too small. The wash hand basin from your room will do excellently. Rub its inside with garlic. Take six or a dozen heads of crisp and curly lettuce, according to your appetite and the number of your guests. Having well washed your hands and them, break them up into pieces little bigger than a postage stamp, with your fingers. The man who would chop lettuce with a cutting instrument would do anything. Add some shreds of fresh onion. Now take the largest table spoon you can find. A small soup ladle were better still. Having arranged your ingredients conveniently about you, hold the ladle in your left hand, and pour into it pure olive oil until it is four-fifths full. Now pour in a spoonful of vinegar, which should remain in the midst of the oil like the yoke in the midst of a fried egg. Dash a dusting of pepper over it, and a generous teaspoonful of salt, and a pinch of mustard, and stir altogether with a fork. Having well stirred, and while still stirring, dribble the contents of the bowl. Then stir up the latter with a wooden fork and spoon, and eat at once. Do not let it stand.

That's the one true salad gospel, of One Who Knows. Me. Precisely.

ONE OF MY YARNS

I am reminded (by something I need'nt mention) of a trip I made to Formosa years ago, in the days when to the Japanese every journalist was a distinguished Englishman, and to be treated as such. I am not denying that it is possible I told them myself that I was an especially distinguished one, just to make sure. Anyway, there was a sort of guard of honour at the seaport, and if there wasn't a special train to Taihoku the capital it looked like one. There seemed to be no other passengers. The British Consul drifted on to the platform, and of course the Japanese hastened to introduce us. They thought it the right thing to do, not knowing what two strange Englishmen are like on first meeting. Instead of striking an attitude of admiration, or expressing his sense of the honour done him, the Consul kept a frozen face, and grunted as if he had a pain somewhere remote. I didn't feel snubbed. To me a British Consul is only a temporary obscuration of the scenery at any time, and I forget that they are human, or that they matter in any way. But I was sore at the possible feelings of my amiable hosts. I didn't want them to know they had made any mistake. The Consul got into the train with me. We were the only two in a big saloon car. After the Japanese farewells were over, I turned to him. He had gone to the opposite end of the car and opened a Daily Mail. I went up to him and standing over him I said: "Look here. I didn't ask for that introduction. You should have guessed that. Don't you dare to imagine I ever wanted to know you. What little I've seen of you is quite enough. As far as I'm concerned I hope never to see your ugly mug again. You get the idea? If you want to say anything now's your chance." If he had said anything I was mad enough to hit him for it, but he didn't. He only grunted again, as if he had another pain.

In Taihoku I happened to meet the American Consul, a charming man with pleasant manners. Purely as a yarn, I told him about the incident, told him humorously, all my peeve having gone in the newer, friendlier atmosphere. Next morning, as I was going on an expedition escorted by Japanese officials, I got a message that the U.S. Consul would like a word with me before I went. I met him. "See here," he said. "I'm not butting in, I hope, but I know what newspaper men are when they get sore. Don't be too hard on that Consul of yours. He's not a bad fellow when you get to know him."

I roared with laughter. I explained that by this time I had almost forgotten all about it, and certainly wasn't sore any more. "Don't you see how funny it is," I said "an American Consul pleading—to an Englishman—for fairplay to an English Consul? I bet he wouldn't take the trouble to do that for you. However, rest easy. I have no intention to roast him."

FIRE.

A reader asks me to suggest, seeing that our fire engines have tanks which have to be filled before the hose starts playing, that it would be a good plan to introduce a chemical extinguisher into the water. It is a plausible idea, and I suppose nothing against it if the expense be not prohibitive, and if the stuff used wouldn't injure the hose. But on the whole I think it had better not go in. We have people who rush into print here with the most asinine letters, and some D. F. would be sure to argue as if we proposed putting tabloids in the tanks. For instance, talking of this week's fire, one said: Of course it would burn fiercely, with such lots of paper in the place." There is no "of course" about it. Paper in bulk is the hardest thing to burn, unless it is stirred up, sheet from sheet. Almost anybody knows that, on reflection, but few remember it.

MIGHT HAVE BEEN

It is to be noted, and might have been expected, that some of the newspaper men were thankful that several things that might have happened didn't happen. One rejoiced that the foliage was dampish, and so on. If I were minded to indulge in that game, I would say how lucky it was that a similar fire didn't occur simultaneously in another part of the city. It might have done. And then how would our fire brigade have managed? As the China Mail pointed out some time ago, we have the far-flung dimensions of a city, with property as costly, and the fire-fighting provisions of a small town. The Government will yet have to spend twice as much on a fire Department, and to make it a separate Department at that, independent of the police.

PRETTY POLLY

I hear that some of the small-vocabularied parrots are still attributing bolshevittic tendencies to me. That is the chief charm of a parrot, that when it once learns a word it seldom forgets it. I take my consolation from the fact that no one has yet described me as "sound." In a live community where live newspapers are possible, that is the final damnation of a journalist, to be described as "sound."

SOUND AND SAFE.

He never says anything that he isn't expected to say. He says invariably what the least accomplished parrots desire to be said. He makes no disturbing ripple on the pool of silence. He never interrupts the larded serenity of the non-intelligent with such a rude, crude thing as an idea. Sound and safe, he invariably remembers to remind us that if the fine weather keeps up it is unlikely to rain. (Applause). He slaps in a ladylike way the wrists of those unbeloved by the populace—is not the voice of the people the veritable voice of God?—and he praises in forceful superlatives the idols of the mob. He agrees over with the majority, and the majority finds him agreeable. He is sound and safe, which being interpreted means soothing. He is a harmless sedative for the intellectually somnolent. Where does he live? What a silly question! That isn't living; it is existing.

AT THE FIRE.

I see in the newspapers that one man boasted of clouting the heads of timid Chinese firemen, and another bragged that he had kicked one. I am a very lazy man, and disinclined to activity; but if others will get me the names of those heroes, and the names or numbers of Chinese firemen who were assaulted, I will get busy and try to arrange for suitable proceedings at the Police Court.

I wasn't there. I had no business there, and didn't go. I see that thousands of others who had no business there were there. What went they out for to see? A spectacle, of course. Simply that and nothing more. A something to admire. A something, judging by the newspaper reports, even to make jokes about. Something also to criticise. How wise are the onlookers about the work that others are doing. "They ought to do so-and-so." "Why don't they . . ?" And so on. Well, that is human nature, and nothing for censure. But these people who thought they were helping by cowardly assaults on men they knew wouldn't hit back are a different proposition. Their loss in the fire wasn't worth insuring against. I don't care who they were—they were ( ) You may insert in the brackatted space an old English noun against which in print the police are peculiarly prejudiced.

THINGS SEEN

Once in a village in Ceylon I called on a Buddhist priest who showed me his little temple. After we had washed our hands and contemplated the Most Wise and Compassionate, and had returned to his study, I spoke of the picture panels we had seen, and asked how they were reconciled with a certain prohibition in the scripture. "I know," the gentle man replied. "It is wrong; but the poor people really need things to see, or they cannot think." In some poor or poorish homes at Home the little one has a moneybox, usually with a slot for the entrance of the savings. The visitor donates a shining sixpence or a fulvous penny. The parent retrieves it from the child, or holds the box and bids it put it in. Have you ever noticed the expression on the child's face at such times? It hovers on grief. There was a brief glimpse of treasure, which has vanished. When, having scraped up the remnants of my income, and perhaps sold something to augment it to a size worth putting in the bank, I fancy I feel much the same. I hand over a bunch of tangible, visible, money, and am turned away with an entry in a book. It is a feeling of loss, of emptiness. Perhaps this explains misers. Maybe they are like the people who must see to realize, people to whom the abstract is less real than the concrete which, though they know it not, is merely symbolic.

HELP! HELP!

Have our local legislators gone crazy? Is this a British Colony? Or did the Prussians win the war? I find myself in violent, unhesitating, determined, shocked and disgusted opposition to "a Bill intituled An Ordinance to provide for the registration of certain persons." I consider it an idiotic example of taking a hammer to crack an egg. I consider it a wanton affront to every national and racial sentiment I was brought up to cherish. It is bound to make criminals of quite respectable people. It is absurdly unnecessary. I find it very difficult to restrain my language. It gives the Captain Superintendent of Police powers over us that he should have only over law-breakers. It adds one more to the list of legislative brain-storms of cerebral typhoons that are rapidly turning our C.S.P. into a Pooh Bah. In case we have any more strikes, the authorities want to know who can help, and in what ways they can help, to keep things going. Judging by past experience, this knowledge could have been got in the most amicable and easy way, instead of demanding and extracting it under penalty. It is an insult to all the volunteers and workers in the last strike. Look at this clause:

(4) Every person shall disclose and produce to any police officer on demand all documents in the possession or under the control of such person tending directly or indirectly to establish the truth or falsity of any of the said particulars."

That is English, but it reads like German. It might have come from Potsdam.

Clause 7 refers to "criminal proceedings under this Ordinance." What a juicy way of warning white and willing men to be careful how they offer their services to the community. There is absolutely no need for this Ordinance at all and it is a most un-English production. It smells of officialism gone mad.

Look at the "Second Schedule," the form you will have to fill up (under penalty for error) for the C.S.P.

"If no house telephone number, number of telephone nearest to residence"

I groaned when I saw that. What else could I do, for I am still more or less sane, I trust. You see the idea. They may want to ring you up in a hurry. State number of nearest phone if you haven't one, and Pooh Bah will command your neighbour to run in and tell you you are wanted. The nearest phone may belong to a striker, or to a personal enemy of yours, or to a woman who wants to marry you. It may belong to any body. No matter. You must find out the number, and give it to Pooh Bah as one that will find you.

"Special qualifications, of whatever kind, and however slight if at all above the average, should be given and in reasonable detail."—What, I ask you, can that mean? I can read plain English, but that has me guessing. What is the average it talks of and how do we ascertain it?

I have never felt so sick or ashamed of any official bungling as of this preposterous Bill.

Assume that a man puts down that he has above the average knowledge of butchering, and the fact is admitted. Assume that he says: "But strike or no strike, I'm never going to butch again. I retired from butching twenty years ago" This Bill doesn't touch him. There is no penalty—yet. Perhaps it is the preliminary to a sort of Industrial Conscription. Well, they cannot have that, and they will not get it. I'll bet on that. So long as the British flag flies in London, they shall not have that, no matter how Prussian-hearted our local legislators may become.

Who was the father of this Bill? If they will let me have his name, I think I can make it famous inside six months, and a household word at Home, like—like Jack the Ripper. For he is certainly ripping something. I complained in a previous paragraph of being slandered as a Bolshevik. Sometimes I am haunted by the fear that I am the sole and only resident who is not a Bolshevik. The officials and legislators whom you love and admire so much have got to prove their innocence of Bolshevism now, for these proposals are no less. Industrial conscription is bolshevism. It is the essential principal of bolshevism, and I hate it. In Russia they no longer conscript the farmer, although everybody else, I believe, is still under it. They included the farmers at first, but had to exempt them. Have you thought why? It is because farming, like some other works, needs the love and enthusiasm of the volunteer. You may conscript an agriculturist but you cannot make him produce crops. Crops may fail even with the trier; but with the conscript any crop at all would be a fluke. It is the essence of the work this infamous Bill is presumably meant to get that it shall be undertaken cheerfully and willingly. You were cheerful and willing enough in the last strike. Why are you now treated like this?

Assume that I am a slacker who will not help my neighbour nor myself in a crisis except under compulsion, and that this Bill is aimed at me. Is it reasonable that you should suffer this trouble, ignominy, and risk in order that they may get one or two slackers.

If we have an unofficial legislator with a mind of his own, now is his chance to use it. Now is your chance to use yours. If you take this lying down, God help you. I can't nor any other. I do not believe that our officials and legislators who may be back of it are deliberately bolsheviatic. I think they legislate in their sleep sometimes, and that this is one of the times. Some somnolent official had a sort of half dream that he should be doing something for his money, and evolved this marvel. It is old custom that the phalanx of officials must vote for anything officially hatched. But if you all show that you do not want it they may throw it out, for they don't want to be bothered with complaints echoed from Home. They have a worse name there already than they fairly deserve.

Their "objects and reasons" this time read like excuses for unreason. They offer no reason at all why the desirable information could not have been collected as among friends and colleagues.

If there are any really patriotic Britons here—who believe in traditions of liberty and British ways of doing things—there will be a big show of protesting letters in the newspapers. And there should be. You really should not take this sort of thing lying down. Object. Declare your minds. Let 'em know.

WATER WASTERS.

I beg to inform the Chinese gentleman who discovered holes in the bottom of Tytam reservoir that he missed the worst. There is a great big hole at the top from which water escapes by evaporation. Unless the P.W.D. put a lid on, we are ruined. I note that at this interesting meeting there was a tendency to introduce a new racial controversy, as to which community wastes water. I deprecate that. Everybody wastes water, and the only practicable check on waste is the meter, and the charge for amount used. It is very awkward, of course, where flats and tenements are concerned, and only one meter to serve several families. But away to surmount that could be found, given the will. I do say of my own knowledge that the gentleman who was so indignant at the suggestion that the Chinese waste water got angry without cause. They do waste it. No Chinese servant thinks of reporting a leaky tap, or even of taking care to close a tap properly. I do not deny that Europeans waste water. As I said before, everybody does, except one or two like myself who know how really precious it is, from having had to draw it from wells, or fetch it some distance. Just now the poorer Chinese who are getting their water from street fountains may be acquitted of suspicion. They are having to pay three cents per bucket to the carriers, or something like that, and are not likely to waste it. But normally they do. They will use a dozen buckets to sluice a verandah when two would do, if they got down to it with a floor cloth.

A CEYLON MIRACLE

Curious story that was, reproduced in Thursday's China Mail from the Ceylon Observer, about a sort of a holy man and a snake. He told the Observer reporter that he would cut the snake into five parts, and find six. It would be a miracle. "How can five parts turn into six?" asked the simple pressman, not remembering that five cuts (which is probably what the artful miracle maker really said) would produce six lengths. If you take a six foot snake, and cut it into foot lengths, you'll find that you need cut only five times.

GUNS

It appears to be well established that some of our gun men are in the habit of leaving their weapons in the custody of house-boys till they want them again, searches being less likely in boys' quarters than elsewhere. Employers might do worse than look-see and report. We have been accustomed to suppose that our armed criminals are mostly outsiders, bandits from the disturbed provinces, but it now appears that regular residents are in the game. A recent case, in which daggers, and a deadly mixture of ground glass and pepper, were impounded, showed that men with good and regular jobs were carrying on dacoity as a side line.

SWATOW TYPHOON.

TREMENDOUS HAVOC CAUSED.

CASUALTIES PLACED AT 5000

TOWN A COMPLETE WRECK.

The s.s. "Kwaichow" arrived in port this morning after having been through the typhoon at Swatow. Officers and passengers of the vessel have interesting stories to tell of the happenings at that port on this tragic Wednesday night.

The progress of the typhoon can be easily traced by the information logged by the Chief Officer of the vessel. The "Kweichow" arrived at Swatow on Wednesday afternoon and during the evening the weather began freshen up. At 8 p.m. the wind had increased in force The report then read on:—

10 30. Wind increasing to typhoon with heavy showers of rain. The barometer has ceased to register.

9.35. Wind fallen to light and moving throughout E. to S. E.

0.40—Wind freshening from S.S.W and increasing in force. Squalls increasing

2.30—Wind reached its full force.

2.30 to 3.10 terrific typhoon force without lulls Deluge of rain.

From this time the wind gradually died down till a moderate gale was blowing At daylight it was seen that Swatow had been very badly damaged.

A passenger by the ship who was on shore during the typhoon gave a graphic description of the terrible havoc wrought by the wind and water. He said that to walk through Swatow now was almost the same as walking through Ypres Scarcely a building in the place has escaped damage. Roofs have been blown off and walls levelled.

The Club is an absolute wreck with just the wall standing. No Europeans have been killed. In one place a telegraph post had been lifted clean out of the ground and flung over the other wires a distance of fifteen feet from the ground. Godowns belonging to Messrs. Butterfield and Swire, with their pontoons and gangways leading on to them have been badly smashed. All along the sea front are piles of wreckage over five feet high while far inland street are block by sampans carried there by the waves.

According to this informant four ships went ashore. One the "Wah Ming," has been got off, but the "Shantung" "Tung Sang" and "Prometus" are still ashore: The "Shantung" seems to be on sand but is damaged about the bows while the "Tungshing" appears to be on the rocks

It is estimated that the water rose from seven to nine feet while one lady recounts that in her house the water rose six feet up the walls in fifteen minutes.

Information received here this morning from the Kweisang stated that the casualties were estimated at 5000.

As the Kueisang was coming to Hongkong it was observed that the lighthouses on the Cape of Good Hope and Sugar Loaf had suffered badly, losing their roofs.

Swatow after the visitation is summed up in three words "An absolute shambles."

THE "CITROEN" CAR.

HONGKONG AGENCY ESTABLISHED.

Mr. A. M. Scellier, special representative of the firm of Andre Citroen, makers of the famous French Light cars was here last week, and left on Saturday after making arrangements with Messrs. Britto & Co., Ltd. appointing them as sole Agents for his firm.

The Citroen which has never been introduced here before, is a nice light car, effects economy in tyres, oil, and petrol, and is remarkably easily handled in a busy thoroughfare, and it should speedily become one of the most popular light cars on the local market. A small four cylinder car, it comes in the minimum tax class and Mr. Scellier feels that the Citroen with its 80 inch wheelbase and 45 inch tread is particularly adapted to the roads of the country in South China.

One Coupe de Ville—a magnificent model—will shortly arrive in Hongkong and Messrs Britto & Co. have also ordered some of the new model two seater cars, which being very strong, cheap and economical, ought to meet with a big demand.

CANTON NEWS.

TSZEHENG CAPTURED.

A cable received here last night announced that Tszeheng has been captured by General Chan Kwing ming's troops after prolonged fighting. General Hui Sung-chi's Northern Expeditionary Army was completely routed and fled in disorder to Nambung. Many prisoners were taken, also large quantities of military equipment were seized, including many field guns.

The situation at other points is reported unchanged, and fighting had been slack for the past two days, both armies concentrating their strength on the Tszeheng engagement, which had always been looked upon as the deciding factor of the fighting.

"PECK'S BAD BOY.

CHARMING CORONET FILM.

Coronet audiences are thoroughly enjoying "Peck's Bad Boy," the delightful picture which features as the star artist young Jackie Coogan, the small youngster who finds himself famous at the tender age of six as the result of his phenomenally successful appearance in "The Kid" with Charlie Chaplin.

In "Peck Bad Boy" young Jackie is the same lovable, round-faced youngster who smashed windows and dodged policemen in "The Kid." He betrays the same endearing naughtinesses. There is the occasion, for instance, when he takes a pocketful of ants to church and lets them run free over the congregation just as the preacher is announcing his text, "Go to the ant, thou sluggard." He does not however, monopolise the limelight altogether. His sister and her young man figure prominently in the film as the parties to a very prettily told love story.

Many giggles are added to a highly diverting film by the ingenious titles which Mr. Irvin S. Cobb, the famous American humorist, has written with wonderful skill.

On the Mainland the storage is 165.14 against 352.50 last year. Consumption on the Island amounted to 196.51 million gallons or 17.5 gallons per head per day, as compared with 284.32 million gallons or 26 0 gallons per head in 1921. On the Mainland consumption amounted to 31.40 million gallons or 7.4 gallons per head per day as against 57 50 million gallons or 14.7 gallon per head last year.

The Government Analyst's report shows that the water is of excellent quality.

CHILDREN'S CORNER.

BLOWING GLASS.

"Gordon you must be more careful," said his mother severely as he dropped a tumbler on to the floor and it broke up into little bits.

"I'm sorry Mother," he said, "it is a good thing though that we have plenty more. There is a whole cupboard full of glass."

"Yes but have you ever thought how long glass takes to make and how much trouble is spent over it," said his mother. "And then you smash it up in a minute!"

"Why how is it made Mother? ask Gordon, who always liked to know the beginnings of things and had never thought that glass took long to make.

"It is made from sand," she told him.

"Sand!" exclaimed Gordon, "What a queer thing because you can see through glass and sand is quite thick. How is it done?"

"The sand is made very hot in a vessel called a retort," his mother told him, "Until it looks like treacle, and then the glass blower dips a steel pipe into it. A blob of the liquid hangs on to the end and he blows it as you do soap bubbles."

"But how can he make it into all the different shapes?" asked Gordon, who thought that it sounded a very difficult sort of job. "Can anyone do it?"

"No indeed they cannot," laughed his mother, "Glass blowing is by no means easy and needs a highly skilled man. "He spins it and moulds it when it is hot until he has made what he wants. One day you shall go to a glass factory and then you will see for yourself that it takes some time."

"Yes I can quite believe that it does," said Gordon, who had never heard about this before.

A HOME MADE GARDEN FOR A DOLL'S HOUSE.

A pretty little garden can easily be made out of the lid of an old cardboard box.

Spread some gum on the box lid and on this sprinkle sand to make winding paths and heap it up for floor beds, after which stick in tiny coloured flowers made from scraps of paper. You can make a lawn in the same way by cutting up some grass finely and sprinkling it on the gummy surface.

For a pond, paint a patch of blue for water and surround it by a fence made of matches with a piece of cotton wound in and out for a railing. It is best to push the matches into small holes made through the cardboard.

A summer house is easily made with cardboard walls and roof. If you want to thatch it take some of the white shavings which you find in chocolate boxes and colour them brown by dipping them in coffee or paint and water and gum them on to the roof. Benches for the inside can be made out of cardboard.

Any small bits of tree or bushes can be stuck into the cardboard for trees.

Do not forget to cut a gateway in the surrounding fence (which is the upturned edge of the box) and you can make a gatepost with bits of coloured wood and hang a small paper lantern over the gate. There is a plant known as the Cape Gooseberry the flowers of which are exactly like tiny orange Japanese lanterns and one of these, if you can get it, looks delightful.

When your garden is ready place it in front of your doll's house and you will find that it looks quite nice.

"THE CAULIFLOWERS."

NEW REGIMENT FOR CHINA.

LOYAL NORTH LANCASHIRES.

Cabling information of Military movements in the immediate future on July 31, Reuters mentioned, among others, the 1st Battalion of the Loyal North Lancashire Regiment, which has been detailed for duty in North China.

A China Mail reporter interviewed Lieut.-Col. Nicholson D.S.O., the D.A.A. and Q.M.G., to gather more information:

Col. Nicholson said that while the "Loyals" cannot yet be said to be definitely coming to China, as Reuter's cable indicated, he had received cabled information of the regiment's pending appointment to this Command, but until the official communication from the War Office confirming the appointment reach Headquarters here, the movement of the regiment can only be regarded as "projected."

However, he personally did not doubt that the appointment would ultimately be confirmed, so that it could safely be taken for granted that the "Loyals" are coming out; and may be Reuter's news was based on more definite information than he at present had.

Asked if the appointment were confirmed, how soon did he think the regiment would arrive here, Col. Nicholson said he doubted it would be this year at all. Perhaps early in January.

The Loyal North Lancashire Regiment was formed in 1881, prior to which the 1st Battalion, which was raised in 1741 was known from 1782 to 1881 as the 47th (Lancashire) Regiment of Foot; and the 2nd Battalion which was raised in 1793, as a militia battalion, and was known from 1833 to 1881 as the 81st (Loyal Lincolnshire Volunteers) Regiment of Foot. The title of "Loyal" was bestowed on this battalion as an honour when it volunteered en bloc for active service in 1833. The title was continued when it became joined to the North Lancashire Regiment, as the 2nd battalion in 1881.

The emblem which is borne on the regimental colours is the Red Rose of Lancaster, while the collar badge is the Arms of the City of Lincoln.

The regiment's battle honours are: "Louisburg," "Quebec, 1759," "Maida," "Corunna," "Tarifa," "Vittoria," "St. Sebastian," "Nive" "Peninsula," "Ava," "Alma," "Inkerman," "Sevastopol," "Ali Musjid," "Afghanistan, 1878-79," "South Africa, 1899-1902," and "Defence of Kimberley."

In peace time, its uniform is scarlet with white facings; and it is now the only regiment bearing the title of "Loyal" and the only one having "Defence of Kimberley" on its colours, it being the regiment which supplied the bulk of the troops defending the town. General Wolfe served in the regiment (47th), and one of its officers, Lieut-Col. Hale (47th) raised the 17th Lancers in Hertfordshire in 1759. Hale had served under Wolfe at Quebec, and brought home the despatches announcing the capture of that fortress.

The nick names of the Loyal North Lancashire Regiment are: "Wolfe's Own," "The Cauliflowers" and "The Lancashire Lads."

During the Great War the regiment served with great distinction in Europe and Africa.

The 1st Battalion which is at present in Constantinople is commanded by Lieut.-Col. E. W. Woodward, D.S.O.

The other officers are:

Majors E.R. Fitzpatrick, C.B.E., D.O.S., A.W. Colley and C.V.M. Bell, O.B.E.

Captains R. J. W. Spread, O.B.E., M.C., E.F. Cunningham, S. H. Batty-Smith, A.R. Bare D.S.O., M.C., G.E. Bowden, M.C., J. Lindsell, M.C., E. G. Riviers, M.B.E., M.C., and Douglas-Stephenson, M.C., (Adjutant).

Lieutenants G. H. Pinsent, M.C., R.B. Rathbone, M. Elrington, M.C., B.O. Ward, W.H. Kingsberry, M.B.E., J.G. Sandie, M.C., R. M. Gidlow-Jackson, A.E. Bulling A.V. Deaton, G.W. Gibson and E.C. Howse.

2nd Lieutenants H.A.C. Hodgson and H. O. Robinson.

Quartermaster, Capt. J. W. Atherley.

MOTOR FATALITY.

POLICE INSPECTOR EXONERATED.

At an inquest held yesterday on a Chinese youth who was killed through colliding whilst riding a bicycle, with a motor car driven by Inspector Grant, a verdict of accidental death was returned.

Mr. M. K. Lo, appearing for the relatives of the deceased, addressed the jury.

He said there were two theories of the accident; that put forward by Sub-Inspector Grant, who said that he was going along Jordan Road and wanted to turn to Canton Road, and that he met the deceased coming from the direction of Tsim Sha Tsui towards Yaumati. The deceased somehow passed him safely and he was then in the middle of Canton Road and found that the cyclist had swerved round in front of the car. There was a collision The deceased was apparently on the left side of the road. The theory was put forward by an eye-witness, a Chinese woman bricklayer, who said that the accident happened in this wise: the Inspector wanted to turn into Canton Road, but, instead of keeping to his left and making a big curve, he took the corner sharp. The deceased was coming down Canton Road from Yaumati to Tsim Sha Tsui. The collision took place about 15 feet from the curb. It was for the jury to say which of these theories was correct.

Before the jury could find the deceased met his death by the first theory, they must explain away two points: (1) that the deceased, though an expert cyclist, did a thing which no rational being would do; (2) that the nature of the injuries received shows he was knocked on the right side where he must have been knocked down on the left side according to this theory.

The Coroner, in summing up reviewed the evidence, and said that the jury had to answer the following questions:—(1) Was the story as told by Inspector Grant a true account of the accident? (2) If so, was he in any way to blame? If they believed the other story, that the deceased was approaching the corner from the north, was Inspector Grant responsible for the accident?

The jury would not have to answer the third question if they answered the first question in the affirmative and the second in the negative. If, however, the jury attached any blame to Inspector Grant they would have to answer a fourth question as to whether Inspector Grant was to blame for culpable negligence. The Coroner defined culpable negligence as reckless want of care. If Inspector Grant cut the corner fine on the wrong side of the road he committed an unlawful act. Similarly if he rounded the corner in a reckless way the jury would return a verdict of manslaughter. If they attached no blame to Inspector Grant the verdict would be accidental death. Similarly, if the jury considered Inspector Grant was in some measure to blame, which could not be termed negligible or culpable, the jury would be entitled to add a rider to their verdict.

The jury after fifteen minutes' absence returned to Court and the foreman (Mr. Bevan) announced that the jury's answer to No. 1, question was: "Yes" and to No. 2, question: "No." The foreman said they wished to express their sympathy with the widow and the deceased's relatives.

The Coroner: I will record your verdict as "accidental death."

BOMBS IN MACAO.

WORK OF CHINESE.

STORY OF THE OUTRAGE.

Following the return of Macao to normal after the recent rioting there, a brief, but disconcerting communication reached here yesterday of a bombing outrage in the Portuguese Colony on Thursday. The cable information was every meagre, but that there had been another serious outbreak of lawlessness in the City was evident, and excitement ran high among the local Portuguese community when the information was made known. Rumour soon became active, and various stories were current in town yesterday.

The first connected story of what actually occurred was received here with the arrival of the Steamboat Company's steamer yesterday evening.

Various informants who arrived by the boat, described the outrage as a sequel to the recent trouble in the City, and an attempt to intimidate the Chinese shopkeepers, most of whom have returned to Macao and resumed business since the commencement of hostilities between Chan and Sun in Canton.

The excitement started at 9 o'clock and continued until nearly daybreak. There was considerable panic in the City, especially among the Chinese population, who were so scared that most of them suspended business the whole of yesterday.

At least seven bombs were thrown, it was said and considerable damage was done. One bomb was thrown into the Victoria Cinema and another into the Military Club, both of which were reduced to a ruins. The bombs were thrown almost simultaneously in various parts of the City, which showed that it was a very carefully planned plot, and it was carried out so quietly that the victims in each case were taken by surprise. All the outlaws responsible for the outrage managed to elude the police. In two cases bombs were thrown in Chinese business premises which had reopened in spite of the fact that the general strike which was proclaimed after the recent troubles, had not yet been suspended. The headquarters of a Labour Guild which did not take any notice of the strike proclamation, was also wrecked.

The bombs used in the outrage were said to be of a very inferior type, which accounted for the fact that the buildings in the immediate vicinity of those affected suffered little or no damage.

Although they had no scruples about committing murder, the bombers were apparently unprepared for wholesale slaughter, for in at least one instance—the Victoria Cinema—someone went in and gave a word of warning, which caused the audience to leave the place hurriedly before the bomb exploded.

Most of the informants agreed that the first bomb was exploded at No. 31-33, Rua da Palha, in premises occupied by the Nam Hing firm of general storekeepers. In this case a Chinese is said to have come into the shop carrying a basket of potatoes. After making a small purchase, he made some excuse for leaving the basket in the shop, promising to call for it later. A couple of minutes after the man had gone the shopkeeper noticed smoke issuing from among the potatoes and decided to get rid of the basket. He was carrying it into the street when the bomb exploded injuring him terribly in the abdomen. He is now in hospital in a very critical condition and is not expected to live. The man's wife and children who were in the shop at the time were also injured, but not seriously.

In the Tai Hong Hotel, a room was engaged and a bomb placed under the bed. It exploded after the customer had gone out and wrecked the room. Owing to its inferior quality this bomb did not explode fully, consequently the building was saved from more serious damage.

In the case of the Victoria Cinema not all who claim to have been there agree that there had been a preliminary warning. One bomb exploded near the operating-box, but the operator escaped injury owing to the fact that he was closed in by fireproof iron walls. The three explosions which occurred within a second of each other caused a tremendous roar which could be heard all over the City.

A few seconds later a bomb went off in the Iuching Cafe but this caused only a small explosion and did very slight damage. Although there were a few customers in the place, no one was injured.

Simultaneously there was a loud explosion in the headquarters of the Chuen Ui General Labour Association. The bomb was dropped on the ground floor which was completely wrecked.

Another bomb fell near the Water Police Station, and it is thought by some that this had reference to the fact that the recent shooting of the mob occurred in this vicinity. Others however, thought that the bomb was intended for the residence of the Commissioner of Police which was not far away.

The bombers turned their attention lastly to the Military Club. A bomb exploded here and had far more serious effect than the others. The building was totally wrecked, both the roof and the walls collapsed and a large shell pit was made in the ground. There were not many people on the premises at the time, for the soldiers had all been called out to help the police and fire brigade when the trouble first started.

An exact estimate of the casualties was not available, but it is estimated at seven wounded, the most serious case being that of the shopkeeper. As far as is known no one was killed.

The police, soldiers and firemen were kept busy all night by the incidents and there was great excitement among the civilian population.

Yesterday morning however, the City resumed a fairly normal aspect as far as the Europeans were concerned and even fire crackers were let off to welcome back a member of the Colonial Administration returning from leave in Lisbon.

LEGAL HUMOUR.

SOME GOOD STORIES FOUNDED ON FACT.

A well-known barrister at the Criminal Bar, who prides himself on his skill in cross-examining a witness, had an odd-looking witness upon whom to operate.

"You say, sir, that the prisoner is a thief?"

"Yes, sir, 'cause why—she confessed it."

"And you swear also that she repaired shoes for you subsequent to the confession?"

"I do, sir."

"Then we are to understand that you employ dishonest people to work for you even after their rascalities are known?"

"Of course! How else could I get assistance from a lawyer?"

"Stand down!" shouted the man of law.

A good story is told of Lord Chancellor Eldon. He was sitting one morning in his study over a table laden with papers, when a very pretty girl, embarrassed by the novelty of her position, but thoroughly in command of her wits, entered the room and walked up to the lawyer's chair.

"My dear," said the Chancellor, rising and bowing with old-world courtesy, "who are you?"

A LORD CHANCELLOR'S PROMISE.

"Lord Eldon," answered the blushing maiden, 'I am Bessy Bridge of Weobly, the daughter of the vicar of Weobly, and he has sent me to remind you of a promise you made to him when I was a baby and you were a guest in his house on the occasion of your first election as member of Parliament for Weobly.

"A promise, my dear young lady? interposed the Chancellor trying to recall how he had pledged himself.

"Yes Lord Eldon, a promise. You were standing over my cradle, when father said to you, "Mr. Scott, promise me that if ever you are Lord Chancellor, when my little girl is a poor clergyman's wife will you give her husband a living?" And you answered, 'Mr. Bridge, my promise is not worth half a crown; but I give it you wi-hing it were worth more.'"

Enthusiastically the Chancellor exclaimed, "You are quite right. I admit the obligation; I remember all about it."

And then, after surveying the girl, whose appearance did not seem matronly, he said: "But surely the time for keeping the promise has not arrived yet? You cannot be anyone's wife at present?"

For a few seconds Bessie hesitated for an answer, and then, with a blush and a ripple of laughter, she replied: "No, but I do wish to be somebody's wife. I am engaged to a young clergyman and there's a living in Hertfordshire, near my old home, that has fallen vacant. If you give it to Alfred—why, then, Lord Eldon, we shall marry before the end of the year."

The Chancellor ordered the presentation to be made out, and Bessie, in great delight, gave her benefactor a hearty kiss and hurried off to Hertfordshire, hugging the precious document all the way home.

FOOLING A JUDGE.

Lord Eldon was a very indifferent shot but an ardent sportsman. On one occasion, having ineffectually discharged two barrels at a covey of partridges, he saw a clergyman approaching who had evidently witnessed his failure.

"Where is Lord Eldon?" asked the clergyman.

"Not far off," answered the Chancellor, evasively and gruffly.

"I wish you'd use your tongue to better purpose than your gun, and tell me civilly where the Chancellor is," rejoined the clergyman.

"Well, I am Lord Eldon. What do you want with me?" replied the Chancellor.

The clergyman had travelled from Lancashire to ask Lord Eldon for a vacant living. It suited Lord Eldon's humour, after assuring himself that the clergyman was worthy, to grant his request.

"But see the ingratitude of mankind," the Chancellor added, when relating the incident. "It was not long before a present of game reached me, with a letter from my new-made rector purporting that he had sent it to me because, from what he had seen of my shooting, he supposed I must be badly off for game. He wounded me in my tenderest spot."

A counsel for the defence once got the better of Judge Bramwell. He requested leave to address the Jury in Welsh, of which Bramwell was ignorant. It was a simple case, and permission was given Counsel said only a few words, and the judge left the decision to the jury with little comment from him. He was, however startled at the prompt verdict of acquittal.

"What was it," he inquired afterwards "that the learned counsel said to the jury?"

A COMMON DEVICE.

"Oh" was the reply "he just said, 'This case, gentlemen, lies in a nutshell. You see yourselves exactly how it stands. The judge is an Englishman, the prosecuting counsel is an Englishman, the complainant is an Englishman. But you are Welsh, I am Welsh, and the prisoner is Welsh Need I say more? I leave it to you."

In the days when theft was punishable with death, Lord Kenyon was called upon to try a woman for stealing forty shillings. She was clearly guilty, but there were extenuating circumstances, and Lord Kenyon decided to recommend her to mercy. He had, however, to pronounce the death sentence upon her, and as he did so she fainted.

Judge Kenyon was greatly affected and cried out, 'Good woman, good woman, I don't mean to hang you! I don't mean to hang you! Will nobody tell her I don't mean to hang her?"

Mr. Justice Maule was once examining a little girl as to her understanding the nature of an oath, and her belief in the future state.

"Do you know what an oath is, my child? asked the judge, in kindly tones.

"Yes, sir: I am obliged to tell the truth."

"And if you always tell the truth, where will you go when you die?"

"To heaven, sir."

"And what will become of you if you tell lies?"

"I shall go to the naughty place, sir."

"Are you sure of that?"

"Yes, sir, quite sure."

"Let her be sworn," said the judge. "It is clear she knows a great deal more than I do."

A common device that has often been employed by counsel in defence of a doubtful case is illustrated by the story of Daniel O'Connell's defence of a man named Hogan, who was charged with murder. A hat, believed to belong to the prisoner, was found near the body of the murdered man, and this was the principal evidence. The body bore marks of violence that could not have been self inflicted, and O'Connell concentrated on the hat.

THE HAT TRICK.

He cross-examined the neighbour who had identified it. "Is it different from other hats?" "No, but I know the hat." "Are you perfectly sure this hat was found near the body?" "Certain."

O'Connell proceeded to inspect the hat, and turned up the lining as he peered into the interior.

"Was the prisoner's name P-a-t H-o-g-a-n" (he spelled each letter slowly), "in it at the time you found it"?

"Twas, of course." "You could not be mistaken?" "No, sir," "And all you swore is as true as that?" "Quite." "Then get out of the box this minute," cried O'Connell, triumphantly.

Then, addressing the judge, he said, "There can be no conviction in this case, my lord. There is no name in the hat!"

MOTOR BIKE ACCIDENT.

POLICE SERGEANT HURT.

Police Sergeant Ellwood of the Yaumati Station is now in hospital suffering from injuries received in a nasty accident whilst riding a motor-cycle on Wednesday night. The Sergeant was proceeding to a small fire in Bailey's shipyard at Tokawan, at a fairly high speed, when in negotiating the corner of Cook Street, Hunghom, the cycle skidded, and he was thrown over the handle bar against a door which was burst open by the force of the impact. Sergeant Ellwood was rendered unconscious and lay on the road until he was discovered by Sergeant Smith who happened along on another motor-cycle. He was removed by motor-ambulance to the Yaumati Station where first aid was rendered and later he was taken to the hospital.

While his condition is not critical, Sergeant Ellwood will be detained in the hospital for some days.

POLICE REPORTS

A box belonging to the principal tenant of No. 43, Gough Street, was opened by means of a duplicate key yesterday and $217 in cash stolen.

Burglars entered No. 13, Chungsha Street in the small hours of the morning and made a haul of jewellery, money and clothing worth $206.

A Chinese who accidentally fell overboard from the Yaumati ferry launch "Feeyin" in midstream is now in hospital suffering from the effects of immersion.

A student of St Stephen's College is in the hospital suffering from injuries received through a fall from a tree in the College grounds.

A piracy was committed at Tungmating, Shuntak district on July 27. The river steamer "Teemin" was proceeding from Hongkong with a coal lighter in tow when it was stopped by two boats containing 10 men each, all armed with Mausers. The pirates searched the cargo for rice and when they could not find any, looted the crews' quarters and stole property worth $623. The "Teemin" continued her trip and reported the occurrence on her return to port yesterday.

BRIDGE BLOWN UP.

A small bridge on the Kowloon-Canton Railway at Pakshek, about 15 miles from Canton was blown up during Thursday night. Traffic was suspended between Canton and Kowloon for several hours, and the first down train from Canton yesterday morning had to be cancelled. The authorities announced at 11 a.m. yesterday that the bridge had been repaired and through traffic was immediately resumed, the afternoon train arriving in schedule time.

GENERAL ITEMS.

LADY BARRISTER'S DISTINCTION.

Miss Frances C. Kyle, barrister at-law, of Belfast, was at a meeting of the circuit of Northern Ireland held recently in Belfast, elected a member of the circuit. Miss Kyle had the distinction of being the first lady barrister in the United Kingdom, and she has now the added distinction of being the first lady member of a circuit.

"SOULS."

We wonder says a home paper, by what inscrutable law of journalistic etiquette the word "soul" is exclusively reserved by newspapers for use in connection with disasters at sea. We have never read, for instance; of two thousand "souls" being killed in a land battle, or fifteen "souls" meeting their death in a railway accident; but whenever there is a calamity at sea involving casualties, the victims are invariably referred to as "souls." We have observed a similar monopoly in the case of convicted murders. These unfortunate persons, like old soldiers, never merely die. Far more magnificent is their exit, they are "launched into eternity."

"THE UNKNOWN WARRIOR."

A notable addition has just been made to the paintings which enrich the walls of the Palace of Westminster. The historic scene in Westminster Abbey at the burial of the Unknown Warrior formed the subject of a picture by Mr. Frank Salisbury, which was exhibited at the Royal Academy last year. Sir Robert Bird, the new member for West Wolverhampton, has presented this painting to the House of Commons, and it fills the panel in St. Stephen's Hall next to the picture by Lucas of the flight of the five members. The canvas was placed in position during the Whitsuntide recess.

THE POPE AND PALESTINE.

A White Paper published in London contains a letter from the secretariat of the Cabinet to the secretary general of the League of Nations in reply to a recent communication from Cardinal Gasparri, the Papal secretary of state, which contended that Jews would be given a privileged and preponderating position under the Palestine Mandate. The Cabinet's reply says that the Cardinal's letter is based on an imperfect understanding of the measures which it is proposed to introduce into Palestine, and encloses various documents relating to the Mandate. The letter emphasises that that the British Government has always contemplated that the status of all citizens of Palestine should be Palestinian, and that the special position assigned to the Zionist organisation does not imply any administrative function. Ample safeguards, adds the letter, have been provided against risk of any nationality or creed being subordinated to any other.

FAMOUS SUICIDES.

CITED AS EVIDENCE OF SANITY.

SOCRATES AND CLEOPATRA.

The hearing was concluded in the King's Bench Division before Mr. Justice Darling and a special jury in mail week of the action in which Miss Lilian Jane Gaul, of Lexham-gardens, Kensington, W., complaining of wrongful detention in St. Andrew's Hospital for Mental Diseases, Northampton, sued the members of the hospital committee and Dr. D. F. Rambaut, the superintendent, for damages.

She alleged that, entering the institution as a voluntary boarder to undergo a "rest cure," she was deprived of her liberty and treated as a lunatic. The hospital authorities, denying the allegations, said that they had acted in good faith. Before she entered the hospital Miss Gaul attempted suicide.

Cross-examining Dr. Rambaut, Miss Gaul remarked that history mentioned many famous people who had committed suicide without the slightest reason for thinking they considered themselves insane. Dr. Rambaut said he could not recall any such case.

Miss Gaul (to Dr. Rambaut): Was there not Socrates?—Yes; he took hemlock (after being condemned for denying the Athenian gods and corrupting the morals of the young).

And he was quite sane?—I am not able to offer an opinion.

And Demosthenes?—Which Demosthenes, the orator or the general?

Later Dr. Rambaut said. "Like Miss Gaul, these people were intellectual. There is nothing about their sanity or insanity."

Mr. Justice Darling: Was not Julius Cæsar an epileptic?—Yes.

A Jurywoman: What about Cleopatra?—I should think it was an attack of acute melancholia.

Mr. Justice Darling: How do you reconcile that with her having ordered an asp (a small venomous serpent) to be brought to her in a basket of figs?—It is quite arguable; acute melancholia and marked apprehension of what was going to happen to her.

HANNIBAL'S ESCAPE.

Miss Gaul: There was Hannibal? (the Carthaginian general who killed himself about 183 B.C.)—He had to escape burning or crucifixion. They crucified their generals in those days if they were not successful.

Do you regard it as an insane thing to kill oneself in that way rather than wait to be crucified?—I do not think that that case and this are analogous.

Dr. Rambaut said he could not express an opinion whether Hannibal was mad or not. He agreed that Miss Gaul thought she was justified in attempting to commit suicide.

Miss Gaul, addressing the jury, said prejudice against her could not have gone further than to suggest that because she had attempted her life she might be capable of committing murder. She referred to the case of Ronald True, and said that the finding of the jury in that case had been overruled by Harley-street doctors and there had been an outcry. She asked for a verdict on the law of the country and not on the law of Harley-street.

Mr. Justice Darling, summing up, said the only issue in the case was whether there had been a breach of contract and breach of duty, the only relative period being that before Miss Gaul's certification as a lunatic.

"There is such a thing as the liberty of wise restraint," said his lordship, commenting on Miss Gaul's complaint of imprisonment. 'In a country governed by law there is no such thing as absolute liberty. You must so use your rights as a free person that they do not infringe on the rights of other people as free persons."

The jury returned a verdict in favour of the hospital committee and Dr. Rambaut, and judgment was entered for them with costs.

HONGKONG TIDES.

The tide-table given below has been compiled at the National Almanac Office in London from the result of the analysis of observations taken by means of an automatic tide-recording machine in the Water Police Basin at Tsim Sha Tsui during the years 1909-9.

The zero of the table corresponds with the zero of the sounding in the Admiralty Chart, which has been found to be 4 feet inches below mean sea-level

To obtain the depth of water on the tide gauge at the Victoria Naval Yard add 8 feet 4 inches, and on the gauge at Lamont Dock, Aberdeen, add 10 feet 4 inches to the height given in the table.

KIPPS IN EXCELSIS.

PROBLEMS OF A MODERN GROCER.

You may admire the deft way in which the grocer fits a brown paper suit on to a bar of soap a penny tin of mustard, and a bottle of sauce so that the whole effect is sylph-like.

But this is one of the least of the many and varied accomplishments a young man must have if he hopes to be the 100 per cent. grocer—the only kind who will qualify for the final certificates of the Institute of Certificated Grocers for membership of the institute and participation in prizes to the value of £200.

Fifty affable, learned, tactful, pushing, intelligent competitors went through many tests at the L.C.C. Technical Institute, Vincent Square, recently, in the hope of winning prizes, chief among which is the "Bournville Prize" of £100 in cash given annually by Messrs. Cadbury Bros., Ltd. Here are some of the things the young man behind the counter had to do:

Identify by appearance many sorts of tea and indicate the country where they are grown.

Afterwards he infuses them, strains off the liquor and identifies them again by taste.

Identify in the same way different coffees, and afterwards roast the beans to the exact of a sample provided.

State clearly the law affecting contracts, food adulteration, etc.

Add up quickly and accurately, and be an expert book-keeper, invoicing, etc.

Understand advertising and methods of business.

Pack up carraway seeds so that they will not interfere with the butter; pepper, which must not get into the tea; and soap, from which the coffee has to be protected.

Finally expert old grocers gathered together before a counter on which were dummy packages and acted as customers, awkward and otherwise. It was a revelation of what is expected of the modern tradesman.

FOR A WEEK STOMACH.
As a general rule all you need to do is to adopt a diet suited to your age and occupation and to keep your bowels regular. When you feel that you have eaten too much and when constipated, take one of Chamberlain's Tablets. For sale by all Chemists and Storekeepers.

CHURCH NOTES.

EIGHTH SUNDAY AFTER TRINITY.

"Then was Jesus led up of the Spirit into the wilderness," these words come into our minds when we read to-morrow's Epistle. Jesus is the Son of God, we are the Sons of God by adoption, and He has led the way for us—a way which begins in the wilderness, a way of prayer and fasting that we may be strengthened to overcome the attacks of the world, the flesh and the Devil. "Mortify the deeds of the body through the Spirit." Alone we cannot know how best to discipline our outward senses but the Holy Spirit will teach us. He will guide us into the best way of offering our bodies as living sacrifices; He will show us that the way of love leads past the Cross, where, if we would at last be glorified with Christ we must wait till we have learned "that all beauty is pain, and that all pain is illuminated by the golden rays of a heavenly beauty."

There can be no "smooting over" of the stern teaching in to-morrow's Gospel. It is not enough to acknowledge Jesus as Our Lord, if He is Our Master, such acknowledgment must lead to service, service to love, love to that surrender which cries out only one prayer "Thy will be done." When Jesus gave this warning to His disciples to beware of false prophets, He knew that they had already submitted to His yoke and to-day His warning comes to us, bidding us to look into our own lives. What fruits are we bearing? The states of our hearts will be shown in outward acts—are we willing to prune and cut away the withered branches—does our light so shine before men that they glorify God? If not, this is what Jesus says "Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down and cast into the fire."

Now are the days when churchmanship is really put to its test in Hongkong. The sweltering heat of the past few weeks has been apt to thin out the nominal churchmen—quite a small excuse will mean a vacant seat nowadays. Those who believe they should be at the Lord's Own Service at the Lord's Own House on the Lord's Own Day will not allow the heat to keep them from their usual places before the Altar.

"Thou shalt be missed because thy seat will be empty."
